

JULIE SCHELL is the Executive Director of Learning Design, Innovation, and Effectiveness and Clinical Assistant Professor at the School of Design and Creative and Technologies at UT-Austin. She is also a Clinical Assistant Professor in the Program in Higher Education Leadership, where she teaches graduate courses in education design, technology, innovation, and design thinking. She is a prominent learning experience designer and internationally sought-after speaker, who draws on over 20 years of experience in higher education. She has held appointments at the nation's top research universities including Stanford, Yale, Columbia, Harvard and most recently UT-Austin. In 2014, Teachers College, Columbia University identified Julie as an Early Riser in Higher Education for her original contributions to the field.

Education

Harvard University, School of Engineering and Applied Sciences, 2009-2012

- Postdoctoral-Fellow
- Advisor, Professor Eric Mazur

Teachers College, Columbia University in the City of New York, New York, New York

- Doctor of Education, Higher and Postsecondary Education; May 2009, GPA 4.0
- Dissertation of the Year, awarded 2010, American Educational Research Association, Postsecondary Division

University of Nevada, Reno, College of Education, Reno, Nevada

- Master of Science, Counseling and Educational Psychology, Information Technology; May 2000

University of Nevada, Reno, College of Human and Community Sciences, Reno, Nevada

- Bachelor of Science with Distinction, Health Sciences; May 1997